This park was constructed on reclaimed land surrounded by canals and waterways. Yumenoshima, island of dreams, was born as a landfill in 1974, and for a long time it could not shake its image as a place where trash is buried. But today, you would never image a mountain of trash at Yumenoshima Park. It is a true island of dreams; a multipurpose park with a tropical greenhouse dome (P. 155), athletic field, and display of the Daigo Fukuryu Maru. With the colosseum at the center, the park has about 120 cherry trees where one can enjoy the blossoms of spring at ease and a variety of wild grasses yearround. As the park was once a landfill, many naturalized plants can be seen.

Barbeque field

Currently not available for use.

Daigo Fukuryu Maru exhibit hall

The tuna fishing boat Daigo Fukuryu Maru that was exposed to nuclear fallout from a U.S. hydrogen bomb test on Bikini Atoll in 1954 is on display. After the incident, the boat was modified for use as a training vessel. Eventually, it was abandoned near the landfill site. Today the precious wooden vessel on display along with related materials and photographs to tell of the horror of nuclear weapons to future generations. The museum was renovated in 2018.
